Crescent City

is one of the most beautiful locations in Florida. The town is in the southeastorn part of Pathan country, 8 miles from Palatka, and is reached by either steamer or ratiroad. Crescent City lies on high ground which rises grace-inclify lies on high ground which rises grace-inclify from the west bank of Grescent Lake, a beautiful sheet of clear water is miles in length and from three to five miles in width. The place is well laid out is town and grove lots, the former constituting a portion of the rown but six blocks in width lying between two lakes—lake Gressent on the cast and lake Stella ov the west. The level of lake Stella is 45 feet busher than that of lake Crescent thus affording perfect drainage. The water of lake Stella has its source in aprings and is kept associutely pure by the town authorities who have made it is misdemeasure to in any way contaminate. The Plant System Bailway touches the west bank of lake Stella two miles from the town and it little steamer conveys passengers and freight to and from the town and Grescent City Junction, the railway station.

The trip by atenmer from Palatika or Jackson, ville is one of the most delightful water ridges in the whole country, and the passenger, who takes this trip is held entranced from start to finish. At a point afne miles south of Palatika the stoamer leaves the St. Johns and enters Deep river, a rather marrow but torthous stream lined on either side by a thick growth of express, ash and palmetto—avertishes forest primeral. The river's curves are sharp and frequent and there is mover a long reach of water in sight. After nine miles of travei through this stream the steamer emerges into the broad and beautiful Lake Grescent. A run of an hour and a half lands the passenger at Grescent City, the steamer's southermmont anding. There will at once, of course, be hundreds of worthy women willing to assist the young fellow to qualify for his inheritance. He says, however, that he is going into incognito and remain a day laborer on the streets of some city, in order to be sure that the woman who marries him will do so for love and not for his fortune. A West Philadelphian sends an anecdote of a 9-year-old girl who had been looking forward with fear to the examinations in the school, says the Philadelphia Times. She was very desirous of promotion but not at all certain of her ability to pass. Her apprehension of failure and consequent humiliation be-came so pronounced as the ordeal drew near that she looked about for some way of escaping. One evening at family prayers, her mother suggested that a brief prayer be said for the recovery of two or three children of the neighborhood who were down with diptheria. The child obeyed, but added a prayer that she might be stricken with the complaint, so company of young people on a straw born the freak has steadily gained in that she should have an excuse not to attend examination. One of the giants of the earth has just died in the Chicago Presbyterian Hospital in the person of Lewis Wil-kins, who was for several months afflicted with a tumor on the brain. He was eight feet two inches tall. When in good health he weighed 365 pounds. A casket nine feet long and twice as wide as the ordinary coffin was constructed for the body.

Wilkins' great height subjected him to many discomforts. When he came from Omaba to be treated at the hospital an ambulance awaited him at the Polk street station. The man was so tall that he could not lie on the regular stretcher, but was forced to sit on the floor of the ve-

In 1855 Matthew Witson died in the village of Brumley and was buried in a cave that opened upon a beautiful valley, through which a bright stream meandered. It was his dying request that a huge demi-ohn of whisky be placed in his arms and buried with him in the cave. He also directed that at the end of seven years the coffin be opened and the demijohn removed and brought to the mouth of the cave, where the liquor should be drank by a picnic party on the Fourth of July.

The will directed that feasting, the content of the
